A general risk assessment is available to read before each session.

Nature-based activities are good for our mental health and wellbeing.

We would like everyone to enjoy the activity that we are doing today and get the most out of it.

Please note these activities are not medical therapies and this is not a clinical or medical setting.

Our goals can best be achieved by being kind and courteous to each other and treat each other with respect.

Think about how much of your own experiences you want to share with the group. You are not under any obligation to share any information if you do not wish to do so.

Please treat any information you hear as confidential and do not share personal information outside the group.

If you have any concerns about anything you've heard or seen during the activity, please let the activity leader know before the end of the session.

Some of the activities may release emotions which can be unsettling for you. If at any stage you feel this is happening to you, feel free to step out of the activity for a bit to have a quiet moment for yourself just let your activity leader know.

If you feel you need help speak to the activity leader.

This will be printed and a laminated sheet can be passed round the group before the activity starts.
